- June peak vs February decline highlights strong seasonality
- Core products (coffee, tea and bakery) are primary revenue drivers.
- Underperformance in packaged and branded items suggests low customer demand or weak positioning of product categories

RECOMMENDATIONS

Seasonal Campaigns

Run seasonal February campaigns: Valentine's promotions and Limited-time drinks, to increase the sales and revenue correcting the seasonal decline

Improve Underperformance

Reposition packaged and loose tea products: Offer discount bundles
Place near checkout for impulse buying
Introduce sampling or tasting campaigns
Improve in-store marketing (signage, placement)

Optimize Products

Increase stock and visibility of: Coffee, Bakery items, Drinking chocolate
Bundle best sellers: Coffee + Pastry" deals to increase basket size

Loyalty Program Strategy

Launch a points-based loyalty system: Earn points during purchases
Redeem for free drinks or discounts
Time-based incentives:
Double points during evenings (low traffic periods) Rewards for Friday morning purchases to retain peak customers.

MARKETING STRATEGY

Focus marketing campaigns on: High-performing locations (scale success strategies)

Low-performing periods (drive traffic) Use customer data for: Personalized offers and Targeted promotions.

CONCLUSION

The analysis highlights clear revenue drivers, time-based trends, and product performance gaps.
Implementing targeted strategies can: Increase off-peak sales, Improve product mix performance and Enhance customer retention.
